DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1, 2, 4, 5, 7, 8, and 10 to 19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by U.S. Patent No. 5,863,669 (Miller).

Miller discloses a brazing sheet having an aluminum alloy core material and at least one clad layer on the core material (e.g., a suitable silicon-containing aluminum alloy brazing layer), wherein the aluminum alloy core material contains the same alloying elements as claimed by the applicants (Mn, Cu, Mg, Si, Fe, Ti, Cr, Zr, V) with alloy elemental ranges which overlap applicants' claimed alloy elemental range limits. Prior art which teaches a range within, overlapping, or touching the claimed range anticipates if the prior art range discloses the claimed range with sufficient specificity. See MPEP 2131.03 and Ex parte Lee, 31 USPQ2d 1105 (Bd. Pat. App. & Inter. 1993). Miller does not teach or reasonably suggest the inclusion of nickel, scandium, and/or hafnium in the aluminum alloy core material. The brazing sheet disclosed by Miller can be manufactured by hot rolling the aluminum alloy core material sheet and the brazing layer or layers followed by artificial aging at an elevated temperature (e.g., 100° to 250° C). The Examiner has interpreted "hot rolling" of the aluminum alloy core material sheet and the brazing layer(s) to include "brazing" of these two sheet materials because the final sheet product disclosed by Miller must consist of metallurgically-joined layers, and "hot rolling" of aluminum alloys normally utilizes process temperatures that are sufficiently high to be considered as "brazing." See line 36 in column 3 to line 67 in column 5, especially lines 1 to 67 in column 5. Miller discloses improved mechanical properties (e.g., improved yield strength) for the brazing sheet material which overlap applicants' claimed ranges of yield strength values. See line 66 in column 3 to line 6 in column 4 and lines 1 to 67 in column 5.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 3, 6, and 9 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
